

KETTERING COLLEGE OF MEDICAL ARTS
Learning Resources Center

Mission Statement

The Learning Resources Center supports the KCMA mission by providing services and resources that support the information needs of faculty, staff, and students and that assist students in learning how to learn, so that they are well prepared for professional and life-long learning.

Goals

The Learning Resources Center strives to

- Provide instructional support services that enable students to achieve their full academic potential;
- Instruct students in effective information-gathering skills, to support class activities and assignments;
- Collaborate with faculty to achieve the institutional competencies of information literacy and critical thinking;
- Proactively promote the use of and competence in current information technologies, including web-based information resources and college web development;
- Facilitate access to authoritative and up-to-date information through a well-organized and easily accessible collection of resources, which support the courses, programs, and degrees offered by KCMA, in a variety of formats (books, journals, audiovisuals, electronic/web-based);
- Facilitate access to information resources supporting faculty teaching and research needs;
- Offer resources supporting the college's Christian principles and values, while facilitating exposure to diverse cultures and points of view;
- Administer fair and objective service policies consistent with Christian principles and values;
- Provide professionally qualified learning resources staff in adequate numbers to meet the learning needs of the college community;
- Provide and maintain adequate physical facilities which enhance learning in a technologically challenging environment;
- Facilitate access to a broad range of information resources beyond KCMA LRC walls through participation in the larger resource-sharing community.

August 7, 2002